

CONDUCTOR SAVES TROLLEY FROM CRASH WITH TRAIN

Throws Car With Passengers
From Tracks as Engine
Rushed to Spot.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 11.—A conductor's ready wit and quick action saved the passengers on a Riverside trolley early to-day.

The car was behind schedule time as it reached the River street crossing in this city. The conductor, whose name is not given, ran ahead, as is customary, and pulled the derailing switch to allow the trolley to cross the railroad tracks.

The rates were up, indicating the car had a clear track, when suddenly the conductor saw the headlight of the flyer bearing down upon him. Notwithstanding that the trolley had started to cross the railroad tracks, he leaped to the switch and the trolley car was thrown from the track and ran parallel with the River street crossing for a distance of several feet.

The derailing switch is placed at the railroad crossing for just such an emergency, as that point is considered one of the worst in the city, there being hundreds of trolley cars and many railroad trains passing in both directions daily.

Had the conductor not released his hold on the switch the trolley would probably have been smashed by the train and many of the passengers either killed or badly injured in the collision.

COWCATCHER WAS AMBULANCE COT FOR INJURED MAN

Bound With Ropes to Engine
Front, He is Rushed from Ridgewood to Paterson.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 11.—Tied to the cowcatcher of an Erie freight engine a railroad workman, with his right leg crushed, was hurried to this city from Ridgewood for treatment to-day.

Henry Reichert, an employee of the Erie, was the man. In some manner his leg was mangled at Ridgewood a few moments before the "wild cat" freight engine came along. There was no doctor at hand and no means of conveying the victim to this place as the engine's cab was the small and the tender was heaped high with coal.

The man's companions, at their wit's end, finally decided that the only way was to tie the victim to the cowcatcher. They placed their coats as a bandage and laying the wounded man in as comfortable a position as possible bound him securely with ropes.

Two of the men stood on the catcher at either side of Reichert and the trip was made in safety to this city. An ambulance was waiting and the man removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate his right leg.

Greenhut and Company Dry Goods

New Models In Women's Coats: Suits

There is a smart style-dash to the Greenhut & Co. coats, a fashion individuality that appeals to modish dressers—who demand and appreciate a degree of exclusiveness hard to find in Ready-To-Wear Coats. We insist that our coats shall be different—that every garment shall show the very latest style-thought in a manner that lifts it above the styles you can find in most every store.

We do not place a tribute on exclusiveness here—we get prices right down to that point when one can feel that beside the individuality, there's a Value that is unmatched elsewhere.
